

FORTUNE

SCHOLASTICS COLLEGE
REGISTERED
JAN 8 2014
LIBRARY

THE FUTURE ISSUE

Starring

ROBERT DOWNEY JR.

Qualcomm: Secrets
of Tech's Quiet Giant

By Michal Lee-Ram

Inside Google Ventures

By Miguel Helft

Why Snapchat Matters

*By Jessi Hempel
and Adam Lashinsky*

Fortune Lays Odds for Everything in 2014

How Does Koch
Industries Really Work?

By Christopher Leonard

ASIA PACIFIC EDITION
JANUARY 13, 2014
NUMBER 1 / FORTUNE.COM

7 At engineering firm ILC Dover, which is designing a space suit for NASA, 3-D-printed glove molds are custom-made for each astronaut.

4 MACRO
Closer Look

Apparel company American Giant makes the most desired sweatshirt on the market. Demand brought an unexpected move: to source and manufacture it all in the U.S.

By Craig Giammona

6 MACRO
International

After relaxing its one-child policy, China braces for a wave of infants. Will it last?

By Scott Cendrowski

7 MACRO
Extraterrestrial

A company that first made outfits for zero gravity redesigns its gear.

By Catherine Dunn

8 MACRO
Hollywood's
Military Complex

The extraordinary savings behind a blockbuster partnership.

By Soo Youn

9 MACRO
Chartist

Dubai leads the Middle East's rise as a hub for air travel.

Graphic by Nicolas Rapp

11 VENTURE
How I Got Started

Inspired by an unlikely episode, Dal LaMagna built Tweezerman from the bottom up.

Interview by Dinah Eng

14 VENTURE
Family Business

Kathleen Doyle is making a bid to turn her family auction house into a global player.

By Dinah Eng

15 INVEST
Emerging Markets

Why 2014 could be Mexico's year.

By Jen Wieczner

17 INVEST
Wealth Adviser

Emerging-market bonds offer diversification and, thanks to a plunge in prices, generous yields.

By Janice Revell

18 INVEST
21st-Century
Investing

Private equity firms are rolling out IPOs of their overhauled portfolio companies at a record rate.

You should think twice before buying.

*By Lauren Silva
Laughlin*

22 LUXURY
Gucci, Chanel, and . . . Qeelin?

The fashion conglomerate Kering is betting that Chinese consumers will covet one of their own—a high-end Asian jewelry brand.

By Jennifer Reingold

3 EDITOR'S DESK
60 BING!

19 Allan Sloan
The Volcker Rule: a triumph of complexity over common sense.

20 Dan Primack
Venture capital will thrive even if tech IPOs don't.

21 Nina Easton
Will allowing more foreign workers shrink the salary gap?

26
The New Koch

Koch Industries may be known as an oil company. But the vast private business empire run by billionaire brothers Charles and David Koch is expanding into vital industries like food, water, and personal technology.

By Christopher Leonard

35
The Future Issue

36
Everything Is Connected

Qualcomm, the company that brought you ubiquitous mobility, is now on a quest to connect all things to the Net.

By Michal Lev-Ram

42
Where Google Ventures Is Pinning Its Hopes

The search giant's venture capital unit, no longer a Silicon Valley punch line, is shaking up the business.

By Miguel Helft

46
A Futurist Knows

In an interview about his career and the future of the movie industry, Robert Downey Jr. tells Fortune about the real-life discussions that have influenced his thinking about technology, business, and entertainment.

By Stephanie N. Mehta

48
Countdown to the Snapchat Revolution

The photo-sharing app is having a moment. Can it figure out a way to make money before the clock runs out?

By Jessi Hempel and Adam Lashinsky

54
The Fortune Crystal Ball

What will get the talking heads talking in 2014—the big deals, the inescapable trends, the newsmakers? Our well-studied predictions for the year ahead.

ON THE COVER AND THIS PAGE PHOTOGRAPHS BY NIGEL PARRY

PRODUCTION DESIGN BY PETER GARGIOLANO; STYLING BY JULIE WALDOV; GROOMING BY RAYV NEWBERG AT TRACT MATTEO; COVER: SHIRT FROM GEORGIO ARMANI; THIS PAGE: BLAZER, SHIRT, TIE, AND PANTS FROM H. LORENZO, SUNSET PLAZA, LOS ANGELES