

Bloomberg Businessweek

WILL TURKEY'S REPUBLIC SURVIVE THE COUP?

A NEWSPAPER FIGHTS FOR ITS LIFE p56

Bloomberg Businessweek

July 25 — July 31, 2016

Opening Remarks The probably unknowable but all-important “natural interest rate”	8
Bloomberg View How to help South Sudan • Addressing the opioid crisis	10
Movers ▲SpaceX has its seventh successful launch this year ▼Netflix shares tumble	13
Global Economics
To bring back Made in America, Walmart turns to an owl	14
China tries to spend its way around a slump	15
Unemployment is down, so wages should be up—and maybe they really are	16
It may be a short trip from Brexit to Brecession ...*	16
Rio auctions off an island paradise	18
Middle-class Russians are struggling	18
Companies/Industries
Big Oil is becoming Big Gas—but Big Renewables are just around the corner	20
VW's emissions settlement won't settle everything	21
Airlines in India are taking off. Places to land are another story	22
Rock climbers find a new challenge: Scaling strip malls	23
Politics/Policy
Unions want a word with Pennsylvania's white working-class voters	24
Candidate Ted Cruz, now and forever	26
The U.S. Department of Agriculture (and education, and child care, and addiction treatment, and so on)	27
Charlie Rose talks to Hillary Clinton	29
Technology
Tesla blames Autopilot crashes on drivers. Will a court?	31
In Silicon Valley, Kaiser Permanente tests the hospital of the future	32
Spotify, preparing for its IPO, hopes to figure out that whole moneymaking thing	33
The little company that Nintendo has to thank for putting Pokémon Go on the map	34
Innovation: Count your sperm in the comfort of your own home	35
Markets/Finance
Vancouver's hot property market may strangle Canada's largest port	36
*...And remaking the U.K. as a tax haven probably won't help	37
Drillers saw hedges against falling prices as insurance; banks saw them differently	38
Defined: Ever wonder why so many hot unicorns have green shoes?	39
Features
Citizen Thiel The free-thinking, Gawker-hating gay billionaire at the GOP convention	40
Redefining Party Unity Among the delegates in Cleveland	44
“New Vista? No, Mister!” Vermonters aren't keen on a Mormon tycoon's mega-utopia	50
The Endless Coup Erdogan triumphed over the army. His war against the press continues	56
Etc.
A practical and only-kind-of-paranoid guide to thwarting hackers	63
Real Estate: Priced out of San Francisco, techies turn the Rust Belt into a Silicon Valley suburb	66
Health: Add a futuristic-sounding adaptogen powder (ground-up mushrooms and herbs) to your morning coffee	67
Marketing: Michelob Ultra has survived the rise of the microbrew by becoming the beer of the “active lifestyle”	68
The Critic: Playing Dead tells you all you need to know about faking your own demise (don't)	70
What I Wear to Work: Director and choreographer Mia Michaels wears glasses with swagger	71
How Did I Get Here? Jonathan Mildenhall, Airbnb's marketing chief, wants to build a more trusting world	72

Cover Trail

How the cover gets made

Domestic Cover

① “The cover is on the Republican National Convention.”

“When is that happening, again?”

“As we speak.”

“Right, right. We have a photographer there, we definitely do. Totally on it.”

(To photography director)

“Hey, so, did we send a photographer to the convention? Or can we send someone really, really soon, do you think? Seems like something we should shoot.”

“There's been a photographer in Cleveland for days. I mentioned this several times, but I think you were playing Pokémon Go.”

“You're my rock.”

International Cover

① “We have a great story about a newspaper in Turkey that's attempting to survive Erdogan.”

“That makes me feel sorta guilty about complaining about the free coffee here. It is pretty bad, though.”

