

Harvard Business Review

36 The Big Idea

Why Your Company
Needs a Foreign Policy
John Chipman

82 Business Models

Turning Services
into Products
Mohanbir Sawhney

104 Managing Yourself

How to Tackle Your
Toughest Decisions
Joseph L. Badaracco

WHAT DOES YOUR CUSTOMER REALLY WANT?

HOW TO FIGURE IT OUT

PAGE 45

September 2016

Contents

45

Marijah

SPOTLIGHT ON CONSUMER INSIGHT

46 CUSTOMERS

The Elements of Value

Companies can increase both revenue and customer loyalty by judiciously selecting from 30 fundamental attributes to augment their value proposition. Eric Almquist, John Senior, and Nicolas Bloch

54 STRATEGY

Know Your Customers' "Jobs to Be Done"

The secret to creating products and services that customers want to buy. Clayton M. Christensen, Taddy Hall, Karen Dillon, and David S. Duncan

64 MARKETING

Building an Insights Engine

A customer-centric approach is vital for driving growth, and Unilever's insights and analytics group exemplifies the 10 necessary elements. Frank van den Driest, Stan Sthanunathan, and Keith Weed

ABOVE
Marijah Bac Cam
X-expression I
Oil and canvas on cardboard

Features September 2016

36

THE BIG IDEA

Why Your Company Needs a Foreign Policy

To navigate the geopolitical complexities of the modern world, companies have to “privatize” foreign policy.
John Chipman

76

NEGOTIATIONS

How to Make the Other Side Play Fair

Challenge it to final-offer arbitration, in which reasonableness can prevail.
Max H. Bazerman and Daniel Kahneman

82

STRATEGY

Putting Products into Services

How professional services firms can improve their offerings and increase profitability
Mohanbir Sawhney

90

MANAGING YOURSELF

The Scandal Effect

The effect of a tainted firm on your résumé may be long-lasting—but it can be survived
Boris Groysberg, Eric Lin, George Serafeim, and Robin Abrahamson