A Word from the Editor

This month we go to work. In our more-or-less annual summary of the world over, we stop in at all manner of companies to learn how work together. There have been obvious trends in the sector over the risk is that things start to look alike. Not unlike the buildings that were new – a few groundbreaking projects garner global attention years of me-too offspring. So it's up to designers to keep matters inventive. What is good in all this, is that employees have vibrant environments more tuned to human interests and habits than ever where it will go next.

Correction

In our last issue, Volume 265, we inadvertently miscredited the project file on 'House For A Drummer'. The wonderful photos were Bert Leandersson. Apologies to all concerned.
